Come with us to Merry Olde England

By Kristi Ruble

Welcome!

As we lift our glasses tonight in a toast to old friends and new, we will journey to a time of Renaissance England, to a time of bawdy living, strolling troubadours, and madrigal singing.

Madrigal singing, brought to England from Italy in the 16th century, was at first an informal type of private entertainment at the castle and country homes of the landed gentry. Frequently, the lordes and ladyes performed the music themselves as they sat at dinner in the Great Hall. Naturally, during the twelve days of the Christmas Season, there was much entertaining and singing of madrigals and carols.

Thus began our first Renaissance Yuletide Feaste as presented by the vocal music and drama departments of BCCC on Dec. 3 and 4 in the Student Union.

The idea for the feaste originated from a yearly tradition at Northwest Missouri State University, where Lori Johnson, vocal music instructor, earned her master's degree. A 20 year tradition at N.W.M.S.U., Johnson said she hopes it will become a tradition here as well.

In the tradition of the Renaissance period, an elaborate feast was prepared for those in attendance as well as for the cast of the feaste. Cast members included: King David Lake, director of continuing education; Queen Sharon Sturgis, director of library services; Lord High Steward Phil Grossardt, foundation president; Lady High Steward Mary Barrows, English instructor; Court Jester Randy Allen, psychology instructor; Hag Lanara Luthi, journalism instructor; Wench Linda Ganstrom, art instructor; Lady in Waiting Stephannie Goerl, English instructor; and Cavalier Matt Gotschall, agriculture instructor.

A dinner concert was presented to enable those in attendance to be transported back to the Renaissance time period. Those who performed were the Madraliers, (BCCC's concert choir), the Royal Brass, (Kevin Frye, instrumental music instructor, and community members), the Recorder Ensemble, (Glenna Gaunt, voice instructor, and her students), the Renaissance Men's Quartet, (BCCC's barbershop quartet), a Harpsichordist, (Virgina Downing, music instructor), and the Renaissance Small Ensemble, (Hilltop Singers).

Lake said, "I think it was an honor and privilege to be selected as the King for the first Renaissance festival held at BCCC. It was really fun working with other members of the college faculty and staff. The cross section of campus personnel involved added to the performance. This was the only time besides musicals that we worked together to perform."

Again, in keeping with the Renaissance time period, all of the cast members were dressed accordingly to match their characters. Johnson said most of the costumes were either made by the cast or donated. Some were modified from last year's musical theater production of "Once Upon A Mattress".

Whether attending the feaste for the food, the music, or even the fellowship, Johnson said, "It was a wonderful way to put one in the Christmas spirit with all the giving, fellowship, and music."

Cast members pay their respects to King David Lake and Queen Sharon Sturgis.

Sharon Higin, St. John freshman; Kim Schleve, Great Bend freshman; Stell Keith, Great Bend freshman; and Shawn Lewis, Wichita freshman share a regal moment of the feaste.

Freshmen adjust to college life

By Monica Swearingen

Many students come to college with the idea that it is going to be one big party. Then they get hit with reality. It is not just a big party it is a constant adjustment.

Students have to adjust to new roommates, new friends, new living styles, new responsibilities, and other new situations.

"The best thing about college is independence. The worst thing about college is independence," Heidi Farris, Stockton freshman, said. "It's the best because no one asks where you were and why you are so late. It's the worst because you have to do laundry and pay your telephone bill."

Many have different ideas about what they like about college. It could be the fact that they can arrange their schedule to suit themselves. Some might like the fact that they can determine what they want to do when they want to do it without their parents permission or knowledge. On the other hand, some might not like the responsibility of getting up and going to class on their own. They may not like sharing a room with someone else.

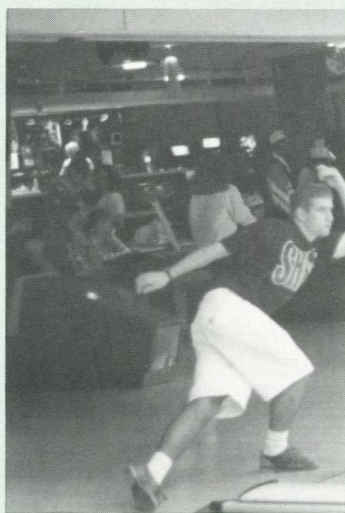

Chris Bartley, Overland Park freshman, said the best adjustment was, "Definitely the freedom, no curfew. You start out fresh. The worst thing about college is that some people are not responsible enough to be away from home and I am forced to deal with it."

According to Amanda Webster, Lyons freshman, the best thing about college is, "You get to meet more people. The worst thing is that there is not enough drawer space."

Regan Holt, Topeka freshman, said that the best thing about college is, "Your parents don't tell you what to do. And the worst is having to buy everything yourself."

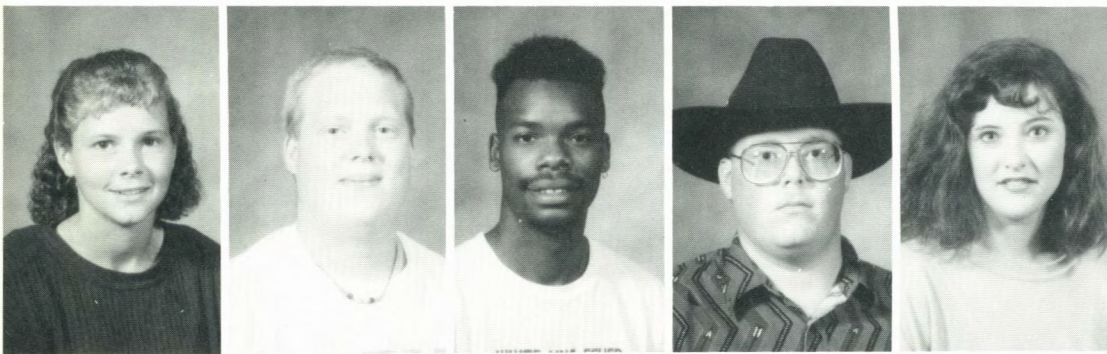

College may have its ups and downs but in all it is a completely new and exciting experience.

Student Diversity evident on campus

By Mandi Heilmann

Enrollment at Barton County Community College for the 1993 fall semester was 5,176. Some come from cities and some from small communities. Most of the students come from the surrounding areas. Chrys Phillips, Larned sophomore, said, "The major difference of living in the country then in the city is there is fresh air, and you can watch the sunrise and sunsets."

Students coming from heavily populated areas may find the small-town atmosphere a big change. Besides coming from large communities to a small one. Some students come to BCCC from foreign countries. They also notice the differences. Hurumi Tago, Iwai, Japan, sophomore, said "The teacher/student communication is very different in Japan than in the United States."

"The teachers in the United States are friendlier, and in Japan the teachers are there to teach and the students to study."

For the first time students may be attending class with nontraditional age students. Sharon Higgons, St. John, freshman, said, "That being a traditional student is easier because you are keeping up with your studies."

Karen Martinez, Lyons, sophomore, said, "It is harder to get in the pace of things after being out of school for so many years."

At BCCC the atmosphere is like a small community. Everybody gets to know everybody by name. Some people will make life long friends. Amy Rychlec, Oberlin, freshman, said, "I already have made friends who have change my total outlook of college life."

David Murrow, Bule Mound sophomore, and Matt Guthrie, El Dorado freshman, practice for the fall play.

Substitutes contribute to team unity

By Heidi Farris

Barton County Community College has one of the most respectable reputations in athletics across the state of Kansas as well as the nation.

This respect has been earned by determined coaches and dedicated players. BCCC claimed the Kansas Jayhawk Community College Conference All-Sports Award for four consecutive years from 1989 to 1992.

Where does BCCC find these athletes? Many of them have been recruited from Kansas high schools and others come from as far away as Jamaica or Venezuela.

This diverse group of individuals all have one thing in common. They have been playing their sport for many years, and most of them were the best at their high schools.

What happens when these top competitors come to play together and someone has to sit on the bench? They sit on the bench not because they are bad players, but because the competition has been pushed to a new level. Assistant Women's Basketball Coach, Mick Goll said, "Every player is a part of the team whether they are seated next to the coaches or on the floor. Bench personnel are valuable for moral, spirit, encouragement and being ready to take over when needed. Since we can only put five people on the floor at once, we have to depend on one another for support.

"Every player is vital to our success. Some of the best players find themselves developing on the bench. What is really important is how players use their time when they are on the bench. For a player to benefit it must be positive in order to enter the game and contribute to the success of the team."

Injuries seem to play a large role in who plays and who sits on the bench. Roger Ward, Great Bend sophomore, played short stop for the BCCC baseball team in 1990-91. For the first time ever Ward found himself on the bench because of ankle injuries. "It was frustrating mentally because I couldn't compete physically," Ward said.

College athletes find that they put many hours into something they may not get the glory for, like they did in high school. At BCCC the best of the best play, but the bench warmers are the ones who keep the starters on their toes.

Computers get friendly with hair.

By Mindi Hess

Unsatisfied with your hairstyle or color? Should you go for the wave or stick to the straight line? Computers can have the answers to these questions. Even for those of you who are not computer friendly, computers provide a service for even the most ugly hair day.

Someone looking for a style change can make a trip to the Barton County Community College Cosmetology Department on Main Street in Great Bend and let the computer get friendly with their face.

This advanced technology can help choose their look for the future. The new computer process, New Image, allows the student stylists and customers to see their clients with different hair styles and colors.

A photograph of the client is analyzed by the computer. Then various hair styles and colors are projected on the screen framing the face.

Brandi Maltbie, Canton freshman, took advantage of the opportunity to see her "New Image".

"My mom always kept my hair short as a child, so the rebellion thing always pushed me to want long hair. The New Image process proved to me that my mom was right."

Maltbie's picture was taken with a video camera and was frozen on the TV screen. A color analysis was done and it was decided that she has a fall/autumn color scheme, meaning she looks better in the fall colors. She then picked a blue background which was used to cover her hair. After trying on many styles and colors Maltbie discovered, "God was completely right in not making me a blonde. What if I had actually bleached it that color - OUCH!"

This preview process will help eliminate much of the guess work involved in changing hairstyles and give the cosmetologists valuable information when advising their clients.

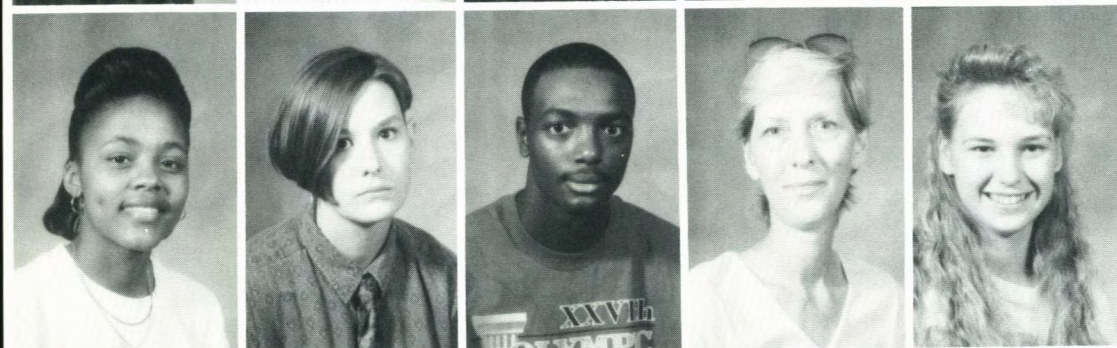

"I'm glad that Mindi (Hess) is my roommate, otherwise I wouldn't have gotten a chance to go through the New Image process. It saved me the pain and time of the experimental process of growing out my hair just to turn around and cut it off again."

Freshmen participate in orientation

By Angie Alvord

Barton County Community College freshman encounter many obstacles during their college career. The first obstacle is moving away from home. Students are moving into the dorms with complete strangers or some have moved into a new apartment where the nicest thing to say about it is all the words on the walls are spelled correctly.

The second obstacle is final enrollment. Picture about 600 students in the Student Union trying to enroll, getting pictures taken, and writing that huge check to the business office to pay for their education.

Finally, the third obstacle strikes for some students. Freshman orientation comes bright and early at 7:30 AM on Friday.

The reputation of orientation at BCCC has spread near and far with many students dreading the buzzing alarm and then sighing sleepily at the thought of boring seminars.

Not only did students attend seminars about topics such as: proper study skills and management of time and money, but they also received a gracious welcome from the BCCC Cougar Danceline, the teaching staff, and Administration.

A special program was presented to the incoming freshman about the do's and don'ts of sex. The speaker used many visual aids and slides to produce many moans and groans from the audience.

Another session included information about computers. The assignment given for successful completion of this segment of orientation was to complete 15 hours of computer lab work and then they were to be tested over the information.

Other session topics included: rape, financial aid, management of social life and school work, and working while going to school. These sessions were designed to help students transition into college.

To end the day, the freshman gathered in the Union for "amoebasizing". A game centered for letting students get to know one another by leaching onto another group of students.

Thus, the end of the dreaded orientation and another freshman class descended on BCCC.

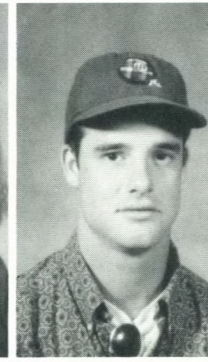

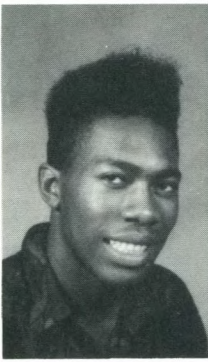

The freshman learned many hot tips at orientation to help make their first year at BCCC a successful one. Not only did the freshman meet staff and other classmates, but they also learned a few survival tactics.

Shad Bernard, Osborne freshman, responded, "I thought it was interesting to meet all the new people I would be spending the next two years with. I have also learned a lot about college by being around the baseball team for which I am a trainer."

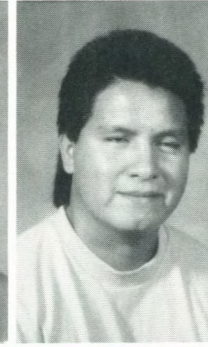

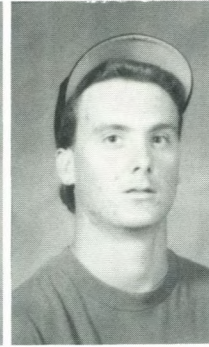

Also responding was Brandi Maltbie, Canton freshman, "The sex portion of orientation was an experience in itself. Now when I meet a new man, I have flashbacks of those pictures. It was nightmare material!!"

Students work in a variety of occupations

By Janae Tatkenhorst

Hi! Welcome to Wendy's, may I take your order? Chris Short, Great Bend freshman, finds himself saying this every night when he works at Wendy's after a long, hard day of classes and other activities. "Working at Wendy's can kind of be a hassle because I'm a full time student, Hilltop singer, and athletic trainer. Plus it cuts down on my social life."

Like Short, many students at BCCC find themselves in this same situation: balancing studies and employment. Students work for a variety of reasons: to pay for their college education, pay for loans, pay daily bills, and to have extra spending cash.

Having a job while attending classes can put extra pressure and stress on students. Full time students also find that having a job can be time consuming, which can in turn cut out their social lives.

Employed students look at having a job as an opportunity to advance themselves. They experience the responsibilities of having a job and what the working world can be like.

Jennifer Cullen, Johnson sophomore, said, "It's hard to keep up in my studies when I work every night. I have my job so I can pay my phone bill and have extra cash. By working in a chain store like Payless Shoes I know that wherever I go I'll be able to get another job."

BCCC offers students opportunities to earn money by being a work study and working for the college. They can also take classes such as rules and officiating, which can lead to jobs as referees at area schools.

Shonna Rexroat, Severy freshman, takes a rules and officiating class from Gary Tranbarger, HPER instructor, which allows her to referee area volleyball matches.

"I enjoy working with young athletes and watching them work to get better at their sport. That's why I like to referee games in my spare time, plus I earn extra spending cash." She said.

Work study jobs also allow athletes the opportunity to earn extra money. Miti Phillips, Kansas City sophomore, is a returning Cougar basketball player and works as the weight room supervisor. Phillips said, "I like it because it doesn't take up much of my time and I can study while I'm there plus I get extra finances."
